Description

Join us as we explore innovative strategies and evidence-based interventions that aim to disrupt the intersection of substance use disorders and sexual health risks. Discover how this discussion will empower attendees to reshape prevention paradigms, fostering healthier futures for vulnerable populations.

Learning Objectives

- Understand the unique challenges at the intersection of substance use disorders and HIV/STI vulnerability.
- Explore evidence-based approaches and cutting-edge interventions that redefine traditional prevention methods, specifically HIV pre-exposure prophylaxis (PrEP) and doxycycline for STI post-exposure prophylaxis (doxyPEP).
- Equip participants with practical knowledge for effective implementation of these biomedical interventions and take a proactive role in reshaping prevention paradigms for individuals with substance use disorders.
